Nanny takes her employer to court

Two caregivers to tell their stories at news conference today ◆ Advocacy group says survey found about one in three low-wage workers in Ontario are victims of wage theft

Lilliane Namukasa left Uganda at 21 to make a new life in Canada as a live-in caregiver for two small children. But after working full time for two years, she was paid just $2,100, then fired without cause, forcing her into a homeless shelter, Namukasa says in a claim filed in Ontario Superior Court.

"Workers should not be forced to take court action to recover unpaid wages, overtime and other employment standards entitlements."
DEENA LADD, THE WORKERS' ACTION CENTRE'S CO-ORDINATOR

The Workers' Action Centre, a non-profit worker-based organization, says the case is one more example of wage theft. The centre, which is holding a Queen's Park media conference today, is highlighting Namukasa's plight and that of another live-in caregiver as part of its campaign to beef up the province's Employment Standards Act. It wants the cap on money recoverable under the act raised to $25,000 and the six-month time limit on monetary complaints increased to 3½ years.

Three men shot in Kensington Market

Six cracks of gunfire woke Jon McCurley from his bed early yesterday morning.

From his window above La Rosa's Bakery in Kensington Market, he saw three men stumble out of the alley next to him, bleeding and pleading for help.

One was shot in the arm, another in the leg. The third, struck in the stomach, crawled along the pavement.

"It seemed like his legs weren't working," McCurley said.

They left splatters of red behind them — along the wall, across a row of garbage bins — to the end of the alley, where a white door was splashed with a long streak of blood.

It was 4:30 a.m.

Police say the victims attended an after-hours club in the basement of 213 Augusta Ave., when an argument spilled into the alley.

The patrons of the club, called the Rainbow Palace, were questioned by police in two TTC buses.

All three victims are expected to recover from their injuries. Police are searching for three suspects, and asking for more witnesses to come forward.

Derek Benjamin, who promoted the event, said it was a monthly gathering for his nearby Caribbean culture shop, Genesis One. They shared vegan food and music, he said — not violence.

No alcohol was sold at the event but some people brought their own, Benjamin said. He said the shooting in the alley had nothing to do with people at the Rainbow Palace.

"I have no idea what happened," he said. "It happened outside … most people heard the stuff outside and went out to see."

Alliance advocates for immigrant workers' rights

Federal government has repeatedly passed the buck of labour protection to the provinces

Foreign farm workers, nannies and other temporary labourers in Canada are forming a united front to fight for better treatment by employers.

"What we are seeing now is a shift and expansion of the temporary foreign workers program from agriculture and live-in care to food industry, restaurants, hospitality and tourism," said Sonia Singh of the Migrant Workers Alliance for Change, the coalition to be launched this week.

"We are seeing worsening work conditions for these workers. It sets a dangerous path to have our immigration policy based on temporary work."

Despite the recent economic downturn, the number of temporary foreign workers in Canada has skyrocketed from 160,908 in 2006 to 283,096 in 2010.

Individual groups have organized within their own sectors, but it is time to have a united front to advocate for all foreign workers, who are at the mercy of Canadian employers and third-party recruiters, said Singh, whose group is made up of 17 grassroots organizations and unions.

Mandate

Among the new alliance's priorities:

- A right to permanent status granted to migrant workers upon arrival.
- Access to all social programs including employment insurance and settlement services.
- Full protection under the Ontario Employment Standards Act.

Canadian Tire charity gets kids in the game

On Saturday, Canadian Tire, Mark's and Gas+ locations across Canada joined together for the third annual Jumpstart Day.

This one day helps up to 30,000 children get off the sidelines and into the game this summer. For every $1 customer donation, Canadian Tire Corporation will turn it into $3, which will help the one in three families in Canada that cannot afford to enrol their child in organized sport.

A recent survey commissioned by Canadian Tire Jumpstart Charities found that the number one reason children are not participating in sports is cost. METRO

1/3 One-third of Canadian parents surveyed reported price is a barrier to enrolling their child in sports.

City councillors taking charge

Creating committees that offer input on everything from cleaning up the Don River to child care

TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

▶ Coun. Mike Layton

Mayor Rob Ford's tight but apparently slipping grip on the city agenda faces a new challenge — councillors launching their own committees and task forces.

Mike Layton, an ardent cyclist, is forming an ad hoc body to replace the cycling advisory committee, which is among the city's 20 citizen groups Ford is trying to scrap.

The committees are in limbo but council recently voted to have Ford take another look at several, and report back by July. It was one of a handful of recent votes the mayor has lost.

Layton (Ward 19, Trinity-Spadina) got the idea from his father, federal NDP Leader Jack Layton, who countered frustration at the loss of the cycling committee by asking: "Why don't you just start your own?"

Layton plans to be the committee's voice at council, asking questions of city staff and passing on input on the plan for separated downtown bike lanes to be unveiled by public works chair Coun. Denzil Minnan-Wong in June.

The new committee will use the terms of reference of the old one as a starting point, Layton said, adding he still must sort out membership but hopes to have representation from the Toronto Cyclists Union.

Coun. Josh Colle (Ward 15, Eglinton Lawrence) also wants to get cyclists on a task force — with drivers, pedestrians, transit users, cabbies and business representatives — to work on solutions to Toronto's costly and frustrating traffic gridlock.

Colle, one of council's rookie centrists, hopes to get colleagues' support to make the committee official, bringing players together to curb the "cyclists versus motorists" dynamic. Ford is fond of talking about "the war on the car."

"We have all the (players) in silos but really their interests are aligned — getting around more efficiently, more quickly and more safely," he said.

Filion won't stop after resigning

Coun. John Filion recently resigned from the government management committee, angry that Mayor Rob Ford's office ignored his requests to return to the planning and transportation committee that he chaired when David Miller was mayor.

Filion (Ward 23 Willowdale) said he will continue participating in planning committee meetings as a visiting councillor, without a vote, but he is also thinking about taking a page from Coun. Mike Layton and starting his own planning committee.

"It could involve a lot of citizens," he said. "I just might do that."

Wartime artifacts go up for auction

Cathy Dixon hoped to find her late father's prized RCAF sheepskin-lined flight boots.

Brett McLellan wanted to buy back his grandfather's Distinguished Flying Cross, pistol and uniform.

Erik Strahl had his heart set on mementoes of the museum that was a favourite hangout when he was little.

After a four-hour auction of wartime artifacts from a private collection Saturday, it was mission accomplished for the 13-year-old.

"Whenever I went to the museum, Bob used to give me something like a model plane," said Erik, whose mother, Nancy Hamer Strahl, helped him bid on four such toys along with "cool" 1940s sunglasses and a gun borescope.

"Bob" was Robert Stuart, a history buff who amassed a huge collection of militaria he displayed in a small museum for more than 30 years at Oshawa's airport. After he died eight years ago, his daughter Deirdre Stuart took over and last year tried to sell the lot online — asking price $1 million.

Outraged that war veterans' family treasures were included in the sale, numerous benefactors asked Stuart to return them.

"If you didn't put it in writing, you pretty much gave it to us," she responded. "Like, hello? How stupid are people?"

▶ Carl Kearnan plans to use his $50 mannequin as a type of scarecrow to deter thieves. Several such figures modelling military uniforms were on the auction block as hundreds of items from a private collection once housed in an Oshawa museum were sold Saturday.

But the sale fizzled and Saturday, Stuart put hundreds of items on the block at Bruce Kellett's auction barn in Blackstock, south of Lake Scugog. As she smiled through hours of bidding from a crowd of 75, a handful of hopefuls sought to reclaim cherished possessions that had been loaned or donated in gentlemen's agreements with Robert Stuart.

Dixon, whose bomber pilot father Angus Dixon died 11 years ago, went home with a heavy heart and empty hands.

"I can't find them anywhere," she said of the boots and dress tunic her distraught mother hoped she would retrieve. "She's disappointed those things will be lost to us. I kind of came to say goodbye."

Sudan forces commit war crimes: Group

Evidence to be sent to UN Security Council President Omar al-Bashir already wanted for Darfur war crimes

An advocacy group said yesterday that new satellite images provide evidence that northern Sudanese troops have committed war crimes, including ethnic cleansing, in the contested border town of Abyei where the forces took over more than a week ago.

The Satellite Sentinel Project said in a statement that satellite images by DigitalGlobe show that the Sudanese army burned about one-third of all civilian buildings in the north-south border town, used disproportionate force and indiscriminately targeted civilians.

"The totality of evidence from satellites and ground sources points to state-sponsored ethnic cleansing of much of the contested Abyei region," the group said. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Civilian danger

- Actor George Clooney urged the UN to protect civilians in Abyei, saying the north's takeover was meant to disrupt the south's upcoming independence in July.
- Tens of thousands of displaced civilians now live in squalid conditions in southern villages.
- Save The Children's U.K. office warned yesterday that a new wave of violent conflict has displaced up to 35,000 children, and are at "grave risk" of being targeted for sexual and physical abuse or recruited into the armed conflict.

Minister resigns amid scandal

A French government minister who was accused of sexual assault resigned yesterday, the prime minister's office announced.

Junior civil service minister George Tron became the subject of a preliminary investigation into charges of rape and sexual assault after two women alleged that he had attacked them between 2007 and 2010.

Tron, 53, is a member of President Nicolas Sarkozy's conservative UMP party.

A statement from Prime Minister François Fillon's office noted Tron has denied the allegations and praised him for acting in the "general interest."

Thousands protest Mladic arrest in Serbia

◐ Nationalists furious that government apprehended wartime leader ◐ About 100 people arrested

Thousands of demonstrators sang nationalist songs and carried banners honouring jailed former Bosnian Serb army commander Ratko Mladic yesterday as they poured into the street outside Serbia's parliament to demand the release of the war crimes suspect, whom they consider a hero.

More than 3,000 riot police took positions around government buildings and Western embassies, fearing that the demonstration could turn violent, as similar rallies have in the past. Riot police blocked small groups of extremists from reaching the rally.

Some in the crowd, which numbered at least 7,000, chanted right-wing slogans. A few gave Nazi salutes. Demonstrators said Serbia should not hand Mladic over to the UN war crimes court in The Hague, Netherlands.

Demonstrators demanded the ouster of Serbia's pro-Western President Boris Tadic, who ordered Mladic's arrest. A sign on the stage read, "Tadic is not Serbia."

Supporters of the extreme nationalist Radical Party were bused in to attend the rally. Right-wing extremists and hooligan groups have also urged followers to appear in large numbers.

The UN tribunal charged Mladic with genocide in 1995, accusing him of orchestrating the massacre of 8,000 Muslim men and boys in Srebrenica and other war crimes of Bosnia's 1992-95 war.

The group has enough food and water to stay for 10 days in the pod, hanging a few metres from the drill bit that would be used to strike oil, Greenpeace said.

PM tours historic town

Stephen Harper's visit comes as country faces major money woes
Prime minister takes break from economic talks during visit to Greece

Hundreds of Greeks lined the streets of the town of Kalavryta yesterday to welcome Prime Minister Stephen Harper as he toured the site of a Second World War massacre by the Nazis.

Harper was cheered as he entered the Agia Lavra monastery, where the Greek revolt for independence against the Ottoman empire began in 1821. In 1943, the Nazis executed 498 Greek men and boys and torched the monastery as a reprisal for attacks by Greek guerilla fighters.

Among those killed was the grandfather of the PM's spokesman, Dmitri Soudas.

The people of the town about three hours' drive from Athens were obviously proud of their link to the Canadian government.

Former mayor George Lazouras told those assembled at a monument to the massacre victims that Canada has allowed many people of Greek origin to live there and succeed.

"One such proud example is your communications officer, Dimitri Soudas," Lazouras said via a translator.

"That is why, prime minister, your presence here today has special importance and meaning."

Harper called the visit sombre.

"These are things we must never forget even as we move forward together," he said. THE CANADIAN PRESS

A cheetah's urban prowl

Not the first time an exotic pet has roamed streets in the Emirates

A city of gleaming skyscrapers along the Persian Gulf hardly seems a fitting habitat for a cheetah, but there it was, prowling among residential villas in Abu Dhabi.

An animal welfare activist who helped rescue the urban cheetah yesterday said it might have been kept as a pet and had an injured front left paw — perhaps from leaping off a roof, where some owners of exotic pets keep their animals.

Raghad Auttabashi of the Al Rahma Animal Welfare and Rescue Society said the big cat appeared to be seven or eight months old and was found with a broken metal chain around its neck.

It's not clear how the cheetah got free in Abu Dhabi's Karama district, a short drive from the skyscrapers lining the Emirati capital's waterfront.

Animal control authorities rounded up the cheetah, which was later handed over to a wildlife conservation centre, Auttabashi said. Cheetahs are listed as a vulnerable species, at risk of becoming endangered.

Church influence falters as Malta says 'Yes' to divorce

- Church leadership issues statement expressing regret for its behaviour during referendum
- Priests urged parishioners to vote 'No' during sermons in country's 400 Catholic churches

Malta — a tiny, staunchly Catholic Mediterranean island — has voted in favour of legalizing divorce, according to the results of a referendum.

Malta is the last remaining European Union nation that bans divorce. But what had been billed as a historic referendum has ushered in a "new Malta," according to a leading politician.

Yesterday's final results of the polling the day before showed that 52.67 per cent of people voted in favour of divorce, according to the Times of Malta.

Prime Minister Lawrence Gonzi, who had campaigned against divorce, said parliament would respect the will of the people in the non-binding referendum and work on legislation to legalize divorce.

The issue has been hotly debated and allegiances went beyond party lines.

"This is a conservative society, but Maltese still live like Europeans. This regularizes their lives," said analyst Saviour Balzan, whose newspaper, Malta Today, had campaigned in favour of the legalization of divorce. "It gives a new lifeline to hundreds of people."

Balzan also said the "Yes" victory makes Malta more European.

LEON NEAL/GETTY IMAGES

"Even though the result is not what I wished for, now it is our duty to see that the will of the majority is respected."
MALTESE PRIME MINISTER LAWRENCE GONZI, IN A TELEVISED SPEECH

"Divorce is not an obligation for a member state, but it brings us closer to Europe," he told The Associated Press. "Europe is not just directives and legal impositions, it's also about culture."

Malta, which also bans abortion, has long Catholic traditions and the church's influence on the nation's 400,000 citizens is still significant. Some 95 per cent of the population calls itself Roman Catholic. Pope Benedict XVI visited the island last year.

The Catholic Church does not permit divorce but does allow annulments.

Joseph Muscat, the pro-divorce leader of the opposition Labor Party, said a new Malta had been born, the Times of Malta reported. The head of the Divorce Movement, Deborah Schembri, said the committee would remain active until divorce legislation was enacted.

"Now the people have spoken, let us give them what they want," she was quoted as saying by the newspaper.

Turnout stood at around 72 per cent — a high figure by Western standards but among the lowest in Maltese voting.

Maltese cannot remarry

Malta currently has laws that allow married couples to separate and work out the dividing of assets and the custody of children. But even couples who married in civil ceremonies — only allowed in the mid-1970s — cannot get divorces in Malta once separated. In short, they can't remarry. Seven per cent of Malta's citizens are separated. But marriage breakups are growing, with the annual rate hitting 27 per cent in the last several years. Also growing is the number of people living together unmarried. Partners who split up have no legal recourse for dividing assets or anything else.

▶ Google vice-president of commerce Stephanie Tilenius wants the smartphone to be the wallet of the future, a vessel for digital credit cards, coupons, receipts and loyalty cards that can be "tapped" to terminals in stores.

PayPal sues Google over hand in Wallet

Suit alleges search engine's then CEO Eric Schmidt, co-founder Larry Page helped hire away key executive

Google Inc.'s ambitious plan to supplant credit cards with smartphones has thrust the Internet search leader into a legal tussle with online payment pioneer PayPal, which contends Google stole its ideas by hiring away two key executives.

PayPal painted a picture of betrayal and corporate espionage in a lawsuit filed in a California court, shortly after the unveiling of the Google Wallet payment service in New York Thursday. The 28-page complaint alleges the service evolved from research that eBay Inc.'s PayPal had been working on for the past decade.

PayPal fingers two central culprits in the intellectual heist — one of its former executives, Osama Bedier, and former eBay executive Stephanie Tilenius.

In its response Friday, Google contends it merely identified talented candidates to run its mobile payments service and made them offers that proved too tempting to refuse.

The civil complaint alleges Google spent more than two years discussing a partnership that would have relied on PayPal to process payments for an application market set up for Google's mobile phone software, Android.

Google cut off the Android talks earlier this year after it had poached enough PayPal employees to set up its own mobile payments service, according to the suit. The suit doesn't directly connect the application markets system with the technology behind Google Wallet.

THE ANSWERS ARE OUT THERE

URBAN COMPASS

LIA GRAINGER
METRO TORONTO

Was 9-11 an inside job? Are crop circles evidence of aliens? And was Osama bin Laden a CIA asset? Step inside Conspiracy Culture on Queen Street West near Roncesvalles and shop owner Patrick Whyte will happily explain why the answers to all of the above questions are quite possibly yes.

"Oh, there's definitely an appetite for this information," Whyte says of the conspiracy-related material he sells. "People are searching for answers."

In the wake of the 9-11 terrorist attacks 10 years ago, Whyte found himself embroiled in just such a search. He wanted hard information — books, films, newspapers — about the numerous conspiracy theories that were ubiquitous online. Yet, in Toronto, he found next to nothing.

Recognizing a void, Whyte decided the city needed a physical space where curious individuals could find alternative information. With the help of his wife and co-owner Kadina Yu, Conspiracy Culture opened its doors for business in 2006.

"We felt we could help legitimize these ideas with a physical storefront," says Whyte, flipping through a book on bin Laden's ties to the CIA. You won't find these sections at Chapters: Shelves labelled cryptozoology, mythical beasts, secret societies, and aliens and UFOs are stacked high with titles like Aliens and the Scalpel, Bird Flu: A Virus Of Our Own Hatching, and Chemtrails Confirmed.

"We try to provide a range of titles so people can come to their own conclusions," says Whyte, who spends much of his 60-plus hours in the shop each week conversing with devoted customers eager to have found someone willing to listen to their often colourful postulations. A popular topic of late has been bin Laden's death: Whyte is quick to remind me that bin Laden's real name is actually Tim Osman, and that he is probably still a CIA asset.

More than a bookstore, Conspiracy Culture also hosts events and speakers on topics like UFOs, chemtrails and the Illuminati. "It's definitely a hub for those devoted to finding the truth," says Whyte, who is in the midst of planning a five-hour show at the Bloor Cinema to commemorate the 10th anniversary of 9-11.

Whyte says many of his customers think of Conspiracy Culture as "a candy store for free thinkers." For them, the truth is out there, so long as you question everything.

MOREHEAD CITY, N.C. Archaeologists recovered the first anchor from what's believed to be the wreck of the pirate Blackbeard's flagship off the North Carolina coast Friday, a move that might change plans about how to save the rest of the almost 300-year-old artifacts from the central part of the ship.

Divers had planned to recover the second-largest artifact on what's believed to be the Queen Anne's Revenge but discovered it was too well-attached to other items in the ballast pile, said project manager Mark Wilde-Ramsing. Instead, they pulled up another anchor that is the third-largest artifact and likely was the typical anchor for the ship.

Apparently, pirates had everyday anchors and special anchors just as the rest of us have everyday dishes and good china.

In 1717, Blackbeard captured a French slave ship and renamed it Queen Anne's Revenge. Blackbeard, whose real name was widely believed to be Edward Teach or Thatch, settled in Bath, N.C., and received a governor's pardon. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Case of mummy smuggling wrapped up

The shipping label said the mailed package contained replicas of Peruvian ceramics. An X-ray machine used by customs agents discovered it really held three skulls and a mummy more than 2,000 years old.

Authorities said Friday the package was intercepted at Argentina's central post office, and an Argentine citizen who was waiting for the shipment has been detained as part of an investigation into illegal trading in ancient cultural artifacts.

Officials speculated the package would have been relayed to a museum or a private collector in Europe, where such old bones are in demand because of the blankets and other woven material that surround ancient South American mummies.

A preliminary evaluation by Argentina's national archaeology institute determined the bones are from the pre-Inca Paracas culture on Peru's coast, and date from between the 7th and 3rd centuries BC, officials said.

Last year, Bolivian police foiled a similar mummy mailing enterprise and detained a woman who tried to send a Peruvian mummy to France. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HAVE YOU SEEN ADS LIKE THIS?

"MONEY PROBLEMS?"

"CREDIT PROBLEMS? Pay NO interest"

"Reduce your debt by up to 80%"

Do they sound too good to be true? That's because they are only telling you HALF OF THE STORY! The procedure you are being sold is called a consumer proposal and may ONLY be administered by a licenced trustee in bankruptcy. After you pay these "consultants" a fee – hundreds, sometimes thousands of dollars – they refer you to a trustee to actually do the work (their ads don't tell you that).

Before you sign any forms, before you pay any fees, "google" consumer proposals and see for yourself…

In order for a consumer proposal to be accepted you need to offer your creditors:

1) More money than they would get if you filed for bankrutpcy; and
2) Enough money to make it "worth your creditors time" – currently that is around 1/3 of what you owe

There's no mystery, there's no clever deals or negotiation going on. These guys never actually speak to your creditors. So why are you paying them a fee?

The choice is yours – if after you speak to a trustee, you still think there's a reason to use one of these "consulting" firms then go ahead – to date, we've never heard of anyone going back once they hear the whole story…

Still not convinced? Their first meeting is free – before you go back a second time and start paying their fees give us a call. We'll walk you through all of your options and then you can decide what's best for you and your family.

One more thing – there are NO upfront fees to file a consumer proposal – if someone wants you to pay a fee BEFORE they file your paperwork then you aren't dealing with the right people!

▶ X-Men: First Class, which opens Friday, tells the story of how Magneto (played by Michael Fassbender), right, turned against his friend Charles Xavier (James McAvoy).

A First Class superhero film?

Opening this week, X-Men: First Class is the prequel to an extremely successful franchise

STEVE GOW
SCENE@METRONEWS.CA

It's curious that while Hollywood seems to be making less movies in general, we are entering a summer that features no less than four big-budget superhero blockbusters — including this Friday's release of X-Men: First Class.

"It's probably down to the fact that maybe less people are going to the cinema and so they make films that are large in scale where you would want to go see it on a big screen," offered star Michael Fassbender recently from New York.

"Genres take hold and they run for a while — I would say that's one of the reasons (superhero movies hold up)."

It probably doesn't hurt that X-Men: First Class is also the prequel to a very successful franchise that began as pulp fiction in 1963.

The beginning of the saga, X-Men: First Class features the original mutant superheroes and how the once-upright Magneto (Fassbender) turned against his friend Charles Xavier (James McAvoy).

  A powerful telepath who can control minds, Xavier recruits fellow mutants to stop a global threat.

  Erik Lehnsherr discovered his power of magnetism under terrible circumstances and sets his sights on revenge with his mutant ability.

"There's such an incredible history there," said McAvoy of the franchise's legacy.

"But the main thing that runs through all the X-Men saga — whether it's the comic books, cartoon-form or movies — is that sense of the outsider being the character that you're exploring ... that has to be one reason why it's stuck around for so long."

The previous films surely added fans to the franchise as well.

However, McAvoy and Fassbender weren't intimidated by expectations of portraying the respective roles that Ian McKellan and Patrick Stewart defined in the movies.

"I definitely watched the films," said Fassbender.

"I was going to study Ian McKellan, perhaps as a young man and his movements, nuances, voice and then decided not to do that and just use the source material available in the comic books — to just take a totally fresh look at it, wipe the slate clean and go for something new."

"Every patient with back pain should be wearing this belt because it gives you core strength and support in your spine, and a traction effect for great pain relief. The great thing is that patients with chronic back pain can wear this belt and get their life back. They can feel more confident, be more active, and do things that they love doing."

"This belt is out of this world! Feels like all the weight is taken off of you and you just feel light. Pain pills only mask the pain. Now that we have the belt I can be pain free. I have a grandson, who loves to be picked up. But you don't realize how much pressure that puts on your back. With my belt, I don't have to worry about picking him up!"

"The belt is very comfortable and it helps to take the stress off my lower back. I feel that I now have better posture and I see how that is very beneficial. I can see this being used by people with chronic back pain and its pharmaceutical free and so easy to do. You just strap on the belt, inflate and you can feel it work right away because it takes the stress off the lower back. You've got nothing to lose if you suffer from back pain. Definitely this is worth trying!"

Kate, shmate: TV heavyweights eye Pippa Middleton

First she had a facebook page dedicated to her derrière Now the likes of Barbara Walters and Oprah want Kate Middleton's sis to rock American TV

After making a splash at her sister's royal wedding last month, Pippa Middleton is apparently in high demand — especially among U.S. TV heavyweights like Barbara Walters.

"Years ago, when Kate broke up with Prince William briefly, Barbara tried to hire her as a View co-host," a source tells the National Enquirer. "But now she thinks Pippa's so sassy, young and gorgeous, she'd be a fantastic fit. Ratings would be amazing!"

But Walters isn't the only one with her eyes on Middleton, as Oprah Winfrey "wants Pippa to host her own show for her OWN network," according to the source.

"O knows it would be a great ratings coup because Pippa's a star on fire — and Americans are so obsessed with the royals." METRO

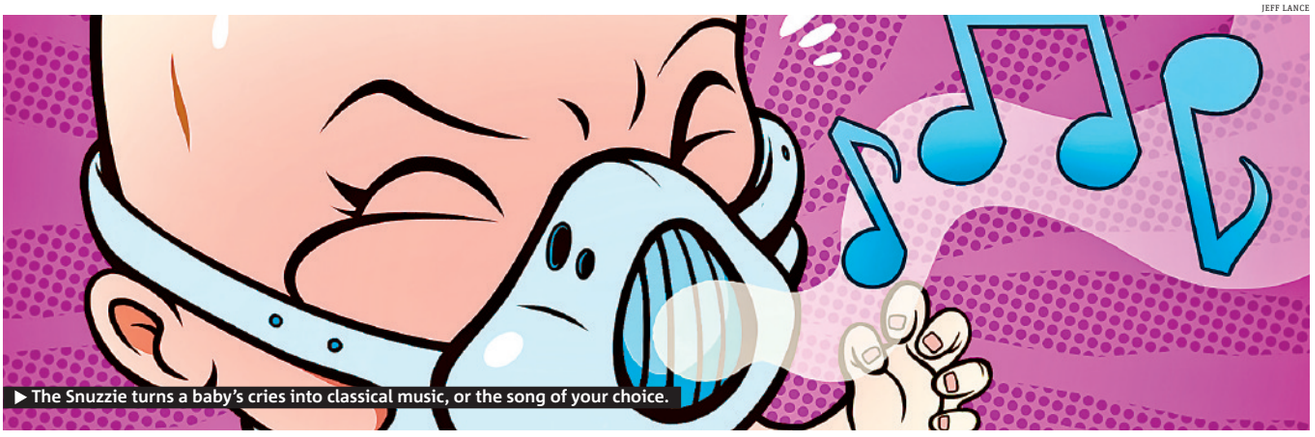
JEFF LANCE



▶ The Snuzzie turns a baby's cries into classical music, or the song of your choice.

Inventions we wish existed

Here are some great ideas with input from Mike Drummond, editor of Investors Digest

The Dummy Dispenser

What it does: Hanging from the crib like a Pez dispenser, it distributes pacifiers when the baby needs one — automatically. If the baby is too young to grab the dummy, a robot arm, covered in kid-friendly foam material, extends and places it gently in her mouth.
Says Drummond: "I suspect Pavlov would love this little number. It encourages motor skills and links desires and behaviour, assuming the dispenser responds to baby cries."

The Snuzzie

What it does: An electronic muzzle device, the Snuzzie turns a child's cries whatever sound you wish, via downloadable MP3s. Future versions will be able to identify what your child wants from each cry.
Says Drummond: "Finally a product that addresses the most annoying consumer group — babies! In all honesty. this is a product for the narcissistic sadist — which happens to cover a large market segment, given the popularity of botox, and the Kardashians."

The Inflatable Stroller

What it does: Small enough to fit in your pocket, this product inflates, with the press of a button, to a full sized stroller, made of durable plastic.
Says Drummond: "I can get behind this product, having been behind far too many stroller-pushing parents at airport security checkpoints. This seems like a win-win-win for all concerned. The parent gets convenience; the baby gets something airy to ride in; and I don't have to wait at airports."

The Self-Cleaning Floor

What it does: An invisible seal covering your hardwood floors, the Self-Cleaning Floor breaks down and absorbs fallen food particles in seconds, leaving no mess behind.
Says Drummond: "Again, an invention I could get behind. And we're already seeing a close cousin of this type of technology being developed in the field of nano medical technology — tiny robots that eat cancer cells and such. But what does this do to the five-second rule?"

The PooLarm

What it does: Embedded into each diaper, the PooLarm reads your baby's body chemistry and lets you know, via digital readout, if she's done.
Says Drummond: "I'm for anything that lessens the risk of coming into contact with feces. But unless you're into changing diapers, I don't see this as a seller. That said, the right amount of fear-based marketing could scare the crap out of diaper competition."

Breads for breakfast, lunch and even dinner

- This Avocado Banana Bread is ideal for a morning or afternoon treat
- The Asiago Garlic Bread makes a perfect side dish to any entrée

BOTH PHOTOS: THE CANADIAN PRESS H/O

This recipe makes eight mini loaves.

A perfect breakfast on the go or a great addition to lunch, this nutrient-filled banana bread made with whole-wheat, high-fibre and folate-rich avocados, and high-potassium bananas is a satisfying treat.

Ingredients:

- 500 ml (2 cups) whole-wheat flour
- 15 ml (1 tbsp) baking powder
- 2 ml (1/2 tsp) sea salt
- 2 pureed avocados
- 2 mashed bananas
- 175 ml (3/4 cup) honey
- 5 ml (1 tsp) vanilla extract

Preparation:

1. Preheat oven to 180 C (350 F).
2. In bowl, combine flour, baking powder and salt. In another bowl, combine avocados, bananas, honey and vanilla. Fold dry mix into avocado-banana mix. Spoon evenly into 8 greased mini pans.
3. Bake 25 to 30 minutes or until toothpick inserted into middle of loaf comes out clean. Let cool then run knife along edges and invert onto wire racks.

Climb every mountain

How a tragic family circumstance inspired one man to reach for the top

TURNING POINT

TERESA KRUZE
LIFE@METRONEWS.CA

When asked to scale the tallest mountain in Africa to improve the quality of life for children struggling with mental illness, Bryce Wylde only had to think for second. "I'll do it," he said. "Count me in."

Wylde is well known as one of Canada's leading authorities on alternative medicine, for his weekly television show on CP24 and his guest appearances on Dr. Oz. But he had never spoken publicly about a subject that is close to his heart.

▶ CP24 host Bryce Wylde will attempt to scale Mount Kilimanjaro in an effort to conquer the stigma of adolescent mental illness.

"My family has been riddled with mental health issues," Bryce admits. He watched his late father struggle his whole life and it left a lasting impact on how Bryce looks at life and health.

Climbing Mt. Kilimanjaro is very challenging and I ask him what he'll be feeling the day he reaches the top. Will it be personal fulfillment, excitement and accomplishment?

Bryce grows silent and his eyes slowly fill with tears.

"That day I'll be thinking about my Dad," he says emotionally, "and the hope that other children will never have to go through what he did."

Junior's home from college

As students return home from school for the summer, parents brace for piles of laundry, late nights and a very different family dynamic

"Mom, you're not even going to do my laundry while I'm home?"

After nine months away, campus and the place where college students grew up may seem like worlds apart.

Summer at home – so often eagerly awaited by the students, their parents and siblings – is often a mixed-up time of happy reunions, unexpected challenges and weird new family dynamics as not-quite adult kids return temporarily to the nest.

"They have a whole new world, filled with new friends and new ideas, new independence," and that sometimes clashes with things back home, said psychologist Karen Levin Coburn, a consultant at Washington University in St. Louis and author of Letting Go: A Parent's Guide to Understanding the College Years.

Cindy Jez, a 55-year-old real estate manager in Richmond, Va., has gone through these transition summers several times with her two oldest boys, a junior and senior in college.

"The first time they come back there's always an adjustment period. There are still boundaries at home."
CINDY JEZ, MOTHER OF STUDENTS

"I remember crying when they first went to college. Now I'm crying when they come home," she jokes.

Don't get her wrong – Jez loves having the boys back home.

And yet, she also knows their return means piles of dirty laundry, a perennially lost TV remote, a disconnected security alarm to accommodate their late nights out, and jealousy from her two younger sons as the big men on campus suddenly get all the attention.

"The first time they come back there's always an adjustment period," Jez said. They're used to the freedom of college life, and "there are still boundaries at home."

"I try not to be a nag. I try to recognize that they're young adults," she says of sons Nolan, 20, and Cory, 22. "They need to have their own sense of responsibility. At the same time, I find myself constantly doing reminders. I'll send them texts: Picked up eight pairs of filthy socks in the family room last night."

"It's a balancing act" for everybody, Jez said.

Meryl Pearlstein, a New York City public relations executive and writer, experienced that last summer when her son, Evan, returned home after freshman year at the University of Vermont. Having him back home was a treat, and knowing he'd successfully navigated that first year away made Pearlstein and her husband proud. But with a younger son at home, "there are turf wars for the car, the living room, the TV and more," Pearlstein said.

"I do hate having World Wrestling Federation on TV and finding snack wrappers in the living room." And when Evan would announce that he'd be home at 3 a.m., "We said, 'No you won't.'"

"There's a bit of give and take over the summer," Pearlstein said.

Timeless wisdom

Karen Levin Coburn's book, Letting Go: A Parent's Guide to Understanding the College Years, was first printed in 1988.

- Families should discuss expectations soon after their students arrive back home – things like curfews, household chores, family dinners, and spending money, so everyone is one the same page, Coburn said.
- Despite all their new-found independence, for college kids, home "is still their emotional touchstone. It's just important for parents to be sensitive to that," Coburn said.

CAREERS IN HEALTH CARE

On the health-care horizon

Growing older

- Canada's population is expected to age rapidly until 2031, by which time the entire baby boom generation would have turned 65.
- The number of senior citizens could more than double, outnumbering children for the first time.
- By 2036, the median age of the population would range between 42 and 45 years, compared with the current median of 39.5.
- Projections also show Canada would have far more elderly people. In 2009, there were roughly 1.3 million people aged 80 or over. This could increase to 3.3 million by 2036.

Globalization, immigration and an aging population are creating new career opportunities in health care ◐ Here's how the medical world is going to change in the coming years

KIM ZARZOUR
FOR METRO

If you have a mind for science and a heart for caring, the future looks full of promise.

Thanks to changing demographics — an aging population and increased immigration — those interested in a career in health sciences have a wealth of options.

"The future is bright because there is always going to be a job in health care," says Dr. Jacques Bradwejn, Dean of the Faculty of Medicine at the University of Ottawa. As Canadians grow older and the population becomes more diversified, he says, the field is ripe with opportunity.

By 2025, one in four Canadians will be over 65, and those older Canadians will need help with their health. What that means for those interested in health sciences is a range of new career options.

Home health care

Research shows people recover faster in their own homes, and a growing number of careers will revolve around providing that home-based care.

In fact, experts are predicting hospitals will become places of training rather than treatment, and homes will be the place where the bulk of care is received, says Aleksandra Zecevic who teaches aging and health at the University of Western Ontario.

The "McJobs" of the future will be personal care workers, as corporations enter the field in the same way privatization took over garbage collection, and the current haphazard approach to home care becomes more efficient, predicts Dr. Ken Rockwood, professor of geriatric medicine at Dalhousie.

A host of other opportunities will arise to meet the home health-care movement, from nurses who specialize in home care, to home renovators who install elevators and easy-access baths.

▶ A growing immigrant population is demanding alternative approaches to health care.

▶ Geriatric rehabilitation is being combined with nutrition, physiotherapy and occupational therapy.

lems — obesity, diabetes, heart disease, cancer and dementia.

Integrated care will become key, creating a need for new disciplines such as geriatric rehabilitation aides with skill sets such as nutrition, physiotherapy and occupational therapy, Dr. Rockwood says.

And, there will be more collaboration between health professionals, adds Doug Angus, director of the PhD Program in Population Health at University of Ottawa. "Traditionally we've trained people from a narrow clinical perspective," but physicians, dieticians, physiotherapists and chiropractors will need to work together in family healthcare teams or community health centres.

Gerontology

There will be a growing need for health-care providers who specialize in the elderly — from doctors of geriatric medicine, to gerontology-focused nurses and social workers — through programs like Grant MacEwan University in Edmonton, which offers a distance certificate program in Post-Basic Nursing Practice, UBC's Okanagan campus two-year Bachelor of Social Work Aging Specialization, and Toronto's Seneca College two-year diploma for social service worker in gerontology.

Holistic health

A growing immigrant population will bring more opportunities. With different backgrounds come different requirements. One example, Angus says, is Vancouver General Hospital, which deals with a large Asian population and is combining Eastern and Western approaches to medicine.

While a variety of colleges and institutes offer training in holistic and naturopathic medicines, mainstream health science programs, like that at University of Western Ontario, now expose undergrads to alternative approaches in health care as well.

Disease management

With immigration and globalization, there's a growing need for professionals who can tackle emerging infectious diseases — think SARS and H1N1. Other diseases, like TB, are re-emerging and providing new challenges since they're drug resistant.

There's a demand for epidemiologists and other professionals who can monitor the growth of viruses and bacteria, predict how populations might evolve and plan for pandemic preparedness.

With an aging population and medical advances, conditions that once were acute and life-threatening, like diabetes and coronary artery disease, are becoming chronic illnesses that will require specialists in health promotion, disease prevention, disease management and rehabilitation to help patients and their families manage their disease.

Technology

The fields of engineering and computer science will also have a role in health care. Imagine a world where your "smart home" has toilets that automatically analyze urine to inform your fridge what nutrients you need, or monitors that let you know by your heart rate or sweat rate to alter the room temperature.

Some of the innovations are already happening, as robotics enable doctors to perform minimally invasive or remote surgery.

And with hundreds of new drugs introduced each year around the world, several colleges like Seneca and Humber in Toronto offer training for much-needed clinical researchers to design, monitor and manage clinical trials.

Diversity

The diversity of Canada's population will continue to increase significantly during the next two decades.

- Between now and 2031, the foreign-born population of Canada could increase approximately four times faster than the rest of the population. By 2031, between 25 and 28 per cent of the population could be foreign-born. About 55 per cent of this population would be born in Asia.
- By 2031, nearly one-half (46 per cent) of Canadians aged 15 and over would be foreign-born, or would have at least one foreign-born parent, up from 39 per cent in 2006.

Taste the waste: unwanted food to be resold as lunch

Millions of tons of food is wasted every year in the U.K. But it's a culinary treasure trove for one café in Haringey, North London, that collects unsold supermarket food and cooks budget meals for hungry clients

ANTHONY JOHNSTON

METRO WORLD NEWS

We would all cringe at the sight of unsold food from shops and restaurant tossed into roadside skips, but how would you react to unwanted food served in a restaurant for a hungry lunchtime clientele?

This is exactly the business of FoodCycle, a London-based charity that turns surplus food from retailers into hearty budget meals.

They run a community café in Haringey, north London, which is abuzz with residents and moms pushing prams come lunchtime, feasting upon dishes of unused food produce donated by local supermarkets.

The fruit and vegetables they get are a day or two past the shops' sell-by date. Resold meat or fish is off the menu "for safety reasons," café manager Jessica Veltman says.

Every year 1.4 million tons of food are wasted by U.K. retailers while 11.9 million tons is thrown out by households, says WRAP, the government recycling body.

RESTAURANT REVIEW

Good, not scary meal

Starter: Parsnip & carrot soup. It was a little too peppery. Were they trying to mask something?
Main course: Jacket potato, topped by aubergines, tomatoes, kidney beans and cheese. No sooner had I tucked into my meal than it began to look like a dog's dinner. But presentation aside, the potato filled a hole in my belly with tasty vegetable goodness. I was left satisfied.
Dessert: Apple & cinnamon cake. Somewhat soggy but in truth scrumptious.
Verdict: In the end, any 'horror food' images were a distant memory. The wholesome meal, and family-friendly ambience, put my mind – and indeed my stomach — at complete ease.

DO NOT THROW AWAY THAT EXTRA DRYWALL

How can I get rid of drywall from my recent home reno?
Calvin of Vancouver

QUEEN OF GREEN

LINDSAY COULTER
GREEN@METRONEWS.CA

Whatever you do, do not put drywall (also known as gypsum board, wallboard, plasterboard, gypboard and sheetrock) into your residential garbage bins.

Drywall is actually recyclable.

Gypsum Recycling International estimates that 40 tons of gypsum waste is landfilled around the globe each day.

Search for a waste transfer station in your city that accepts gypsum drywall.

Residents of Vancouver can drop off "residential quantities" of drywall at any regional transfer station or at the Vancouver Landfill.

A "residential quantity" means one level pick-up truckload or less.

If you have a large load, contact New West Gypsum Recycling.

They recycle all non-asbestos-containing drywall from the region into new gypsum drywall.

Make sure that your drywall does not contain asbestos. To dispose of gypsum drywall containing asbestos, call 604-RECYCLE for disposal options.

While you're at it, check out how to recycle wood waste, too.

Clean, unpainted, untreated wood waste can now be recycled at transfer stations and the Vancouver Landfill.

Wood waste is added to the yard trimmings pile.

Clean and some treated wood are also accepted at Urban Wood Waste Recyclers' plant in South Vancouver.

Did you know you can also recycle asphalt shingles?

They can be dropped off at a few facilities around Vancouver.

Find the location closest to you on at metrovancouver.org under Metro Vancouver Recycles listed under "Building Materials — Roofing / Shingles".

Jays get to White Sox early

First inning homers pace Toronto's blowout win Chicago starter irked by Bautista's swagger

JAYS	WHITE SOX
13	4

Back-to-back home runs ended a long drought for Aaron Hill and Edwin Encarnacion.

Hill hit his first homer of the season and first career grand slam before Encarnacion also hit his first homer, and the Blue Jays went on to beat the Chicago White Sox 13-4 yesterday.

Encarnacion's homer completed a six-run first inning for the Jays (27-26), who had 18 hits to win three of the four-game series.

"It's taken a while," Hill said. "It's always nice. It relaxes you a bit to get one on the board and you keep going."

Hill couldn't remember hitting a grand slam in college, either.

"It's something I've always wanted to do," he said. "Obviously, I've never done it before. To get the team rolling, especially in the first inning, it's always nice."

Corey Patterson hit his fourth homer of the season for Toronto and had four hits and three RBIs. He had a career high five hits including the game-winning homer Saturday in the 14th inning.

Carlos Quentin hit his 13th homer for Chicago (24-31) while Ramon Castro added his second of the season in the ninth inning.

Blue Jays left-hander Ricky Romero (5-4) has often lacked run support this season but took advantage of the offence, allowing six hits and two runs in seven innings. Romero contributed in another way — Encarnacion used one of the pitcher's bats to hit his home run before breaking it on a fifth-inning single.

"I actually just got my bats in this week because we're getting ready for interleague play," Romero said, "And I told (Encarnacion) messing around, if you need a home run just go grab my bat because it probably has a lot in it.

"He was out there acting like he's Babe Ruth or something ... I just told him to run the bases and quit acting like a clown."

"Sure enough, he comes out of the dugout and he's kind of flashing the bat in front of me and I said, 'Oh you are going to use it?' And sure enough he goes out there and hits a home run with it."

Romero has a couple of other bats left from the shipment and he told Encarnacion he is welcome to use one of them. "Just don't break it," he said.

Romero said his warm-up in the bullpen did not go well since he couldn't get his arm angle where he wanted it.

"But I battled and I let them put the ball in play and let the defence work," he said. "I started feeling a lot better in the last two or three innings. Mechanically, I felt the ball was starting to come out of my hand a little better."

Left-hander John Danks (0-8) allowed nine hits and nine runs in four innings on 96 pitches for the White Sox. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Outside the box thinking gives Canucks edge

By bringing new ideas, GM Mike Gillis has helped take Vancouver to its first Stanley Cup final in 17 years

JONATHAN HAYWARD/THE CANADIAN PRESS

▶ Canucks general manager Mike Gillis takes questions from reporters last week.

From the day Mike Gillis was hired as general manager of the Vancouver Canucks, he's done things differently.

The status quo isn't good enough for Gillis. He believes just because something has worked in the past, it doesn't mean it can't be improved.

In his three years in Vancouver, Gillis has ruffled feathers and his ideas have been mocked. But with the Canucks preparing to play the Boston Bruins in the franchise's first Stanley Cup final in 17 years it's hard to argue with the results.

"We've tried to be as scientific in the approach of developing and interacting with players as we could be," Gillis said while watching a recent Canuck practice from the stands at Rogers Arena.

"I have no idea how much that has influenced the outcome. I think there is some influence for sure."

Gillis talks about the plan he devised for the Canucks. He won't give specific details of the plan, but points at the team on the ice as its product.

"We had a plan that we stuck to no matter what was going on around us, no matter what the speculation was around us," Gillis said.

"We knew we were going to have a good team. We didn't know if we were going to be able to add parts that would make us a really good team. When those parts began to occur, we got progressively better."

The Stanley Cup final begins Wednesday at Rogers Arena. Game 2 will be Saturday.

Gillis and his staff have managed to work within the confines of the NHL salary cap to build a Canuck team full of skill and deep in talent.

Goaltender Roberto Luongo was signed to a 12-year, $64-million US deal. It was a contract that satisfied Luongo while counting as a $5.33-million hit on the Canuck books each year.

Gillis convinced other players like Daniel and Henrik Sedin, Alex Burrows and Ryan Kesler to re-sign for less money than what they might have received from other teams.

The Canucks reputation as an organization that wants to win while caring for its players resulted in free agents like defenceman Dan Hamhuis and centre Manny Malhotra picking Vancouver over teams willing to pay them more.

"People have focused on the idea that players are taking less," said Gillis. "Our commitment to them is we are going to spend every cent to make this team better.

"If we didn't follow through on that, we wouldn't be able to get players to buy into that kind of idea. I think the guys here understand we are committed heavily to winning, no matter what it takes."

The team has a nutritionist. The Canucks dressing room has even been renovated.

Henrik Sedin said it's all made a difference.

"They way they treat us in the room, the travel, everything, it's a matter of guys really wanting to play here," said the Canucks captain.

THE CANADIAN PRESS

Off the ice

Some of Mike Gillis's off-ice innovations have raised eyebrows.

- A sleep doctor advises players on when they should nap and even helps determine who should room together on the road.
- Gillis has tinkered with the travel schedule, having the team stay overnight after some road games instead of immediately flying home.

Sea Dogs win Memorial Cup

Jacob DeSerres solid in goal in return to final

The second time was the charm for Jacob DeSerres.

DeSerres stopped 34 shots to lead the Saint John Sea Dogs to a 3-1 Memorial Cup final win over the Mississauga St. Michael's Majors last night, disappointing the Hershey Centre sellout crowd of 5,429.

The 21-year-old was appearing in his second straight Memorial Cup final. Last year, he helped the Brandon Wheat Kings reach the title game before surrendering nine goals in a loss to the Windsor Spitfires.

But the Calgary native was a rock for Sea Dogs, who stormed out to a 2-0 first-period lead before DeSerres stood tall to help his club withstand a spirited comeback bid by the hometown Majors.

Simon Despres, Zack Phillips and Jonathan Huberdeau scored for Saint John (3-1), which became the first Maritime team to win the Memorial Cup.

Riley Brace replied for Mississauga (3-2).

Saint John came out strong in the first period, outshooting the Majors 11-9. Despres' unassisted short-handed goal just 2:24 into the first effectively quieted the big crowd.

DeSerres made two stellar saves after Saint John killed Mississauga's power play, and that turned out to be important as Phillips scored at 13:17 to make it 2-0. The score flattered the Majors, considering the Sea Dogs didn't score on four first-period power plays.

But Mississauga outplayed the Sea Dogs in the second, outshooting them emphatically 15-6. After Maxim Kitsyn's shot went off the post early, Brace finally gave the crowd something to cheer about at 14:41 of the second as he cut the Sea Dogs' lead in half.

INDIANAPOLIS 500

Crash in last lap tips race

JR Hildebrand was one turn away from winning the Indianapolis 500 on his very first try. Then, within sight of the checkered flag, the 23-year-old Californian made the ultimate mistake.

Hildebrand slammed into the wall on the final turn, and Dan Wheldon drove past to claim an improbable Indy 500 win yesterday in his first race of the year.

"It's a helpless feeling," Hildebrand said.

Wheldon, the 2005 winner but without a full-time ride this season, appeared headed for his third straight runner-up finish as Hildebrand took the white flag with a comfortable lead and needing only to make it through the last of 200 laps around the 2½-mile speedway.

The first three turns went smoothly. Then Hildebrand came up on another rookie, Charlie Kimball, in the fourth turn. Instead of backing off, Hildebrand moved to the outside to make the pass, got in the rough patch of the track and lost control. He slammed the wall, allowing Wheldon to drive into Victory Lane.

"I caught him in the wrong piece of track," Hildebrand said.

"I got up in the marbles and that was it."

FIFA suspends two executives over allegations

FIFA suspended senior executives Mohamed bin Hammam and Jack Warner over bribery allegations yesterday, while completely exonerating president Sepp Blatter in the gravest corruption crisis facing football's world governing body.

Blatter now is in line to be re-elected unopposed to a fourth term Wednesday after his only challenger, Bin Hammam, withdrew his candidacy just hours before being provisionally excluded from all football activities by FIFA's ethics committee.

The ethics panel said there was sufficient evidence to further investigate allegations that bin Hammam and Warner, the CONCACAF president, offered $40,000 US bribes to delegates at a Caribbean football association meeting May 10-11 in Trinidad.

Send a KISS

You can now post your kiss, and read even more kisses, online at metronews.ca/kiss.

Hey Tom, I just want to do this so everyone can see how much I love you. Youre a great inspiration and influence in my life. You made me into the great person I am today and I can't thank you enough. I know we been through hills and ditches but that wont stop us from reaching the top. I love you so much. <3 LOVE STOMY

My Handsome King. You are my best friend and my lover. I am so lucky to have you. Even though you're a continent away, I have you close in my heart and in my dreams. I'm just sorry I don't get to see your sexiness on the beach. Muah! From YOUR OBEDIENT SERVANT.

My Love. Keep ur head held high and dont let anyone bring you down my original g-star.rotpot got your back, baby. From RPANGEL

Aries March 21-April 20 Anything done as part of a team will go exceptionally well over the next seven days.

Taurus April 21-May 21 If a friend or relative needs a shoulder to cry on today you will be there for them.

Gemini May 22-June 21 You are in the mood for fun and games and you'll get plenty of both over the next few days

Cancer June 22-July 22 Make it your aim to stand back from what you are working on.

Leo July 23-Aug.23 You won't want to push yourself too hard today.

Virgo Aug. 24- Sept. 22 You will be acutely sensitive to others people's problems today.

Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23 An active imagination is generally a very good thing but don't let it run riot today or you'll see enemies behind every door.

Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22 You need to find ways to catch the eye of employers and other important people.

Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21 If you want to take a longer vacation, now is the time to do something about it.

Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 20 It's okay to dream, but don't let infatuation take hold.

Aquarius Jan. 21-Feb. 18 Forget about anything but having a good time with the people who mean the most to you.

Pisces Feb. 19-March 20. After a period of intense activity should come one of well deserved rest. SALLY BROMPTON
